"I CANNOT TELL YOU how much pleasure

THE LITTLE GENTLEMAN IN GREEN,"

so my own family shall have offered," says a gentleman of rare culture and influential position. "My little son, to whom I am accustomed to defer in reference to books addressed to children, has just informed me that he has written a poem, and sent it to me, which I am sure will be highly appreciated by you."

I am sure he will be greatly gratified by your kind expression of his satisfaction by saying, "Father, The Little Gentleman in Green."

This I take it, is the name of an ingenious and intelligent boy's poem, and I hope it will be in these times of rough English in good modern speech.

This lovely book for Boys and Girls is beautifully illustrated, elegantly bound, and sells for $1 in any bookstore on Broadway.

CHASTELARD,

A TRAGEDY.

BY ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

Author of "Atalanta in Calydon."

1 vol., 16mo., cloth, $1.50.

Mr. Swinburne, as a Poet, has the promise of rare excellence—Commercial Advertisements.

"Atalanta" was a most marvel of literary execution, being removed by subject and treatment from the stirring life of today. "Chastelard" is a long step nearer home, its subject being one of the erratic loves of Mary of Scotland, presented with rare grace of diction and polish of style.—Springfield Herald.
